

WHAT'S YOUR SPEAKING STYLE?

Examine your brain preference!

The first step to determine your speaking style is to look at how your brain is wired and how it shows up in your communication. Read these brief descriptors to see which style fits you best:

*You are charismatic. You don't have to think about what you say, it just comes out and you can fill the space with words. You don't need a script or a lot of time to prepare. Many times you will speak, and THEN think. If this fits you, you are "THE WINGER"

*You spend lots of time preparing, thinking through what you will say. You plan your points, your arguments, and facts. You're introspective and thoughtful about words. Your core message has to be on point. If this fits you, you are "THE CAUTIOUS ONE"

*You write down everything. You want to capture every word possible so you don't forget. Then you go over what you wrote and memorize it. You are uncomfortable without the paper and/or memorizing. If this fits you, you are "THE MEMORIZER"

Next, Examine Your Approach

Your speaking and communication approach is a combination of your brain wiring and learned behaviors. Read these brief descriptors to see which style fits you best:

 *You talk in details and concrete facts. You only want relevant and proven information. You don't like a lot of fluff. If this fits you, you are a "DATA MINER"

 *You talk in concepts, theories and patterns. You enjoy philosophical conversations and talks about possibility. If this fits you, you are "THE HIGH RISER"

 *You talk using stories and metaphors or analogies. You are focused on relationships and your conversation reflects this. If this fits you, you are "THE METAPHORIST (OR STORYTELLER)"

Which one are you?

When you combine your brain preference and your approach, you get a type of style. What is yours?
